The square at St. Leonhard Gymnasium, in need of new definition and circulation, is planned with a loose arrangement of thrones and a distinctive border edge defined by hedges and wall, known as the 'Green Wall' and the 'Stone Wall', as key zoning elements. The color palette takes hints from the blue azur spar stone façade of the St. Michael Church. Seven crimson red thrones of solid concrete provide special places to sit and gather and are the highlight of the otherwise reserved square design.
