As part of the campus expansion of Fulda University of Applied Sciences, new attractive open spaces are being created at the refurbished and new buildings on Moltkestraße, which will be assigned to the Faculty of Nursing and Health. Two new inner courtyards mediate between the existing building fabric and the new building: a ‚private‘ area for internal institute use and an area with a public character. The interface between the old and new buildings and the inner courtyards is the representative entrance and the spacious foyer. The outdoor areas of the university in Fulda have the following features after the conversion: a campus courtyard paved with natural stone, a guidance system for the blind with acoustic panels, workstations made of custom-made wooden benches and tables, pine planting and a green border of shrubs and grasses. The mirror elements in the inner courtyard are art in architecture.
